Why Canadian federal electoral reform matters

Federal electoral reform is part of the Government's stronger democracy agenda. Canadians expect greater inclusion, transparency, meaningful engagement, and modernization from their public institutions. Federal electoral reform is part of the Government's commitment to change. Canada has a strong and deeply rooted democracy. One way to protect our democratic values is by continuously seeking to improve the functioning of our democratic institutions—including our voting system. I need to hear from you! Have your voice heard and get involved in one or more of our interactive and educational town halls in Hastings—Lennox and Addington!

Guiding principles for Electoral Reform

The following five guiding principles may help you think about what you want from federal elections, your Member of Parliament (MP) and your federal government. They can help you decide what is important to you when it comes to potential changes to our democracy at the federal level by considering how any proposed reforms might:

- Restore the effectiveness and legitimacy of voting, such as by reducing distortions and strengthening the link between voter intention and the electoral result
- Encourage greater engagement and participation in the democratic process, including by underrepresented groups
- Support accessibility and inclusiveness of all eligible voters, and avoiding undue complexity in the voting process
- Safeguard the integrity of our voting process
- Preserve the accountability of local representation

"To be your voice in Ottawa, rather than Ottawa's voice in the riding, I need to hear from you! I hope that you can join me at a town hall in one of our Hastings-Lennox and Addington communities!"
